The AMC Cancer Research Center (AMC) and the University of Colorado Cancer Center both have impressive histories. AMC has been in the Rocky Mountain Region for more than 100 years, dedicated to the relief of human suffering across the United States. Its strength in Prevention and Control sciences has gained it national attention and support. Together, they are providing complementary, comprehensive services unlike any other facility in the Rocky Mountain Region and very few in the United States. Their combined efforts will unify toward a common goal to eliminate the pain and suffering due to cancer.
